HUNDRED YEAR CLUBS

Believe Life May Be Prolonged.
 Men who are devoting their lives to the study of longevity believe that in days to come a man of ninety will be in his prime, and old age will be a thing of the past.

Scientists have proved that the simple life, temperate habits, exercise, and an active mind are essential to a long and happy life.

When the blood gets thin and sluggish and creeps lazily through the veins, there is nothing that will enrich the blood, improve the circulation and restore strength to the body so quickly as our delicious cod liver and iron tonic Vinol. Here is proof:

Mrs. Michael, of Lewiston, Pa., at 85 years of age was so weak she had to be wheeled around in an invalid's chair—she writes that after taking a few bottles of Vinol she could take long walks and do her household work. That shows how Vinol strengthens old people.

Try Vinol on your guarantee that it will do you good or cost you nothing. Graham & Company, Druggists, Connellsville. Vinol is sold in West Side by Fred H. Harned.

London, April 7.—A costly residence at Norwich, burned to the ground last night, was set on fire by suffragettes, according to statements made by the police. The building was a mass of flames when the firemen arrived, and efforts to save it proved futile.

The early release of Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, the militant suffragette leader, is expected today. Mrs. Pankhurst's condition on account of lack of sufficient nourishment is said to be critical. Since being admitted to the prison she has steadfastly refused to partake of food.

Suffragettes here are today denouncing the police for permitting men and boys to line up their demonstration meetings yesterday at High Park.

A Fallacy Dispelled.
 Many of the deleterious effects ascribed to coffee, chiefly by those who have "an axe to grind," have been proved to be incorrect by experiments carried out by Professor H. L. Hoffmann of Columbia University, New York City. His recent experiments go to prove that high class coffee is not injurious. This is welcome news to those who enjoy good coffee. Stomach results have been obtained with "BREAKFAST CHIEF" coffee. High grade coffee produces a delicious, creamy beverage, refreshing and free from impurities. It is responsible for unfavorable effects. You can drink "BREAKFAST CHIEF" coffee with assurance and healthy enjoyment. Be sure to order some of this coffee today.—Adv.

"The Old Homestead" will always rank among the great plays of the American stage, even after it has ceased to be presented, and lingers only in memory. It has no plot, no high flow dialogue, no rolling periods—these are all lacking. What it successfully purports to be is a character study, with little of the usual dramatic elements, wanting, but in its place is an exquisite representation of honest motives. The famous quartet of farm hands and Grace church choir, is still the musical feature of the production. The original company, under the personal direction of Mr. Frank Thompson, will be seen here in the grand old play.

THE BACK YARD FARMER BY Prof. John Willard Bolte

Making a Garden Productive.

With proper soil treatment, the average garden will produce a half more than it now does.

Most amateur gardeners have neither the time nor the inclination to master the fundamental principles of gardening, as it involves too much research work and the unavoidable study of a lot of unimportant matter, in order to get to the important facts. For this reason this series of articles is designed to present actual concrete facts regarding this and allied topics and they will be presented in such a way as to be immediately applicable to the everyday problem of any of our readers who can be interested.

The garden plot should be well drained and it must not be shaded to any extent. Drainage takes away surface water rapidly and keeps the soil water away from the surface, so that the roots can grow deep and the air can enter the soil and aid in decomposing it. All soil is composed of mineral, rocky body, usually clay or sand, and a varying amount of organic matter, that is, decomposing plant and animal remains.

The growing plant lives principally on oxygen taken from the air, and nitrogen, phosphorus and potash, which are taken from the soil. The nitrogen is produced from the organic matter in the soil and is liberated by the action of bacteria, which rot this organic matter. These bacteria cannot work unless they get air, hence, the necessity for drainage. The same principle holds good for the liberation of potash and phosphorus, though front action is more potent than bacterial action here. The necessary phosphorus and potash are derived from the mineral element of the soil, and all three of these soil foods are sucked up into the plant through the roots with the water. This water is evaporated through the plants' leaves and the plant foods are retained and digested in the leaves and stems.

This digestive process is carried on by the little green cells which give color to the leaves. These cells, called chlorophyll cells for short, will work only with the help of the sunlight. If shaded too much they lose their color, go into a decline and the plant dies.

Again let us state that a good garden must be sunny and well drained, and now you know why.

The next feature is fertility. Almost all soil contains an immense amount of plant food. Ordinary virgin clays, mucks and loams contain enough potash and phosphorus for hundreds of years.

Why, then, do such soils peter out and fail to produce good crops after a while? Usually because the elements and the bacteria cannot decompose the soil fast enough to get the plant foods into such shape that the plants can take these foods up and use them. It also may happen that continued growing of the same crop will poison the soil as far as that crop is concerned.

The nitrogen gives out first, usually, and it is most easily renewed by using stable manure. This will also help by releasing the organic matter in the soil and is liberated by the action of bacteria, which rot this organic matter. These bacteria cannot work unless they get air, hence, the necessity for drainage. The same principle holds good for the liberation of potash and phosphorus, though front action is more potent than bacterial action here. The necessary phosphorus and potash are derived from the mineral element of the

There were some peculiarities of the weather on Saturday evening, when there was a clear sky and the stars shined brightly wherever one would see, and yet some showers fell vigorously for several minutes. This took place on Saturday evening, and to add to this there was a shower of rain falling perhaps a minute or so with the sky clear and stars shining. The cold that came Sunday night was not welcome, however, and it is feared that damage resulted from it, judging from the number of buds to be seen lying on the ground the next morning.

FOR WOMEN.
There was a large attendance of the women at the First Methodist Protestant Church on Sunday morning when the pastor, Rev. H. S. Piper, preached a special sermon to the "Woman's Foreign Missionary Society." THAT MISSING WORD

This Week It Begins With "S" and Ends With "S."

Notwithstanding the fact that we made the word quite easy last week, quite a number of persons did not find the correct word, but on the other hand a great many did find it. The word used was JUST and was omitted from J. B. Davidson's grocery advertisement, between the words ATE and AS. This week we have put the word back in this ad in order to let you see from where it has been removed.

The missing word on the page this week begins with an "S" and ends with an "S." Now jump in and see what kind of a hunder you really are. Those who should miss three or four words permit us to say: Do not get discouraged, as those who find the first word are apt to fall down on several later ones. This you see will even up. It is not thought any one will find all the words. The highest number out of 12 may not exceed eight or nine, as from time to time the words will be made more difficult, so dig in and stick right to it to the last. Then, too, remember there are Eight Gold Awards.

Sugar is Big Lump of Contentment for Tariff Makers. Senator Ransdell Leads Fight Against Free Duty.

WASHINGTON, April 7.—Sugar seems to be the biggest lump of contentment for the tariff makers. It is not a sweet lump either. It is already encumbered by ill feeling, and it is likely to cause a split unless a compromise is reached before the tariff bill is finally presented to congress. The advocates of free sugar are being stoutly opposed by the best sugar and sugar cane interests. Senator Joseph E. Ransdell of Louisiana is leading the fight against admitting sugar free under the proposed new bill. He claims with those who are arrayed with him that free sugar will ruin one of the biggest industries of the south and of portions of the west. Conference of the sugar men was held at the rooms of Senator Ransdell. In addition to the senator there were present most of the Louisiana delegation in congress, Sol Wexler, President of the Whitney National Bank of New Orleans; Robert Ewing, member of the Democratic national committee from Louisiana, representing the cane sugar growers of Louisiana; Henry T. Oxnard and Truman G. Fisher, representing the American beet sugar growers, and Sidney Dillon as legal representative of the Hawaiian sugar cane growers. The advocates of a duty on sugar are canvassing their strength in the Senate to find out how many votes can be obtained against free sugar in the Senate from the Democratic side. President Wilson submitted an alternative for free sugar to the representatives of the cane and beet sugar growers. He told them that unless they were willing to accept a duty of one cent a pound on Cuban sugar, totaling 30 dollars to run for three years and at the end of that time to cease, giving free sugar thereafter automatically, then he would insist that the new tariff bill remove all duty and give free sugar as soon as the bill goes into effect.

AT THE THEATRES.

THE SOISSON.

One cannot expect a new charm and graceful air of Hosselina's music. It permeates "Three Twins" like the fragrance of a lovely bouquet of flowers.

The rich melody made "Madame Sherry" the success that it is. It is a gift of absolute sunshine. Unlike many composers of modern times, he never repeats himself. One musical comedy is as different from another as day is from night.

The extraordinary prosperity of "Three Twins" is a record for the musical comedy records for just one season—and is likely to equal that record this season. It is a genuine merit goes for anything—is due in a great measure to the delightful musical score which every moment is of superior quality.

Musically then, "Three Twins" is a rare treat even if it is only given in a theatre in its pretty, attractive and delicate fancy. Nothing to equal it in a likeable, wholesome way is current in American musical comedy this season.

But, strangely enough in musical comedy, music-vocal music—is held of the slightest account. It is the riot of color, the flashing of skirts, the poverty of lights, the whirl of the dance, the nonsense of the comedian that most attracts.

All these are given rather summarily in "Three Twins" which will be the offering at the Soisson tomorrow night.

"THE OLD HOMESTEAD," which will be the attraction at the Soisson theatre, matinee and night, Friday, April 11, will always rank among the great plays of the American stage, even after it has ceased to be presented and lingers only in memory. It has no plot, no high-flown dialogue, no rolling periods, these are all lacking. What it successfully purports to be is a character study, with plenty of light and shade; intrigue is wanting, but in its place is an exquisite representation of honest motives. The present is the twenty-seventh season of Dennison Thompson's famous play and it will doubtless go on for many more years delighting theatregoers all over the country. The famous quartette of the Uniontown and Grace Church Choir is still the musical feature of the production.

"THE COLONIAL."

"THE HEART BREAKERS." Manager Mort H. Singer's latest musical comedy hit which enjoyed a six months run at the Princess Theatre, Chicago, and is in its second season on the road will be seen on Friday, April 18 at the Colonial Theatre. It will serve to introduce the latest of musical comedy stars, namely George Dandridge, who played the Prince in "The Merry Widow" for the last five years. The piece is up to the par excellence standard of all the Singer productions, and has the same pretty and attractive chorus that has made Manager Singer's name a guarantee of clean and wholesome plays. There are many novelties introduced, and Mr. Dandridge has a waltz number with Miss Myrtle Vail that bids fair to become as famous as the Merry Widow waltz.

THE ARCADE.

The bill for the first half of the week is intended to be an index of the character of attractions to be presented in the future. Heading the bill is Miss L. Reine in the big spectacular dancing novelty. It will be interesting to know the first costume she wears weighs seventy pounds, measuring forty yards around the bottom with the costume worn in the beautiful "Dance of the North" has three hundred yards of real Japanese silk in it. This act comes from New York, where the really wonderful "Dance of the North" was a sensation. Harris and Randall, another feature of the bill with amusing comedy called "Fifty Miles From Nowhere."

Others will be Pauline Josef, that dainty comedienne with the latest songs and costumes, and Great Keeler, the juggling man.

In another photograph is shown a street that was devastated by the flood.

Losses Watch in Spree.

Great Liner Sails in Double Skin to Save Her From Titanic's Fate; is the Olympic Really Unsinkable?

THE OLYMPIC AND HER DOUBLE SKIN

SOUTHAMPTON, April 7.—The liner Olympic, which has undergone changes costing $1,250,000 since the sinking of the Titanic, left here on her first trip in six months. She carried 1,700 passengers, including 250 in the saloon. The engineers insist that no such disaster as that which befell the Titanic could befall the Olympic, for the reason that collision with an iceberg would not destroy her, while if her side would be ripped open by a clanking blow the inner shell would keep her afloat long enough to allow all on board to be saved. The lower picture in the illustration shows the space between the outer and inner hulls.

Do You Need Assistance

IN THE SELECTION OF YOUR WALL PAPER?

There is a logical sequence governed largely by the existing conditions in your home which if followed will produce correct results. Each room should be treated so as to give it correct form and proportions.

Then there is the question of color and design which must suit the individualities of each room as well as harmonize with the adjoining rooms. Especially is this true of parlors, dining room and reception hall or any group of rooms when considered collectively.

I can render you valuable assistance in the selection of your Wall Papers.

"Well, but, good Lord, Mirandy, you must be put to it mighty hard to tend to your washin' and look after that tiffin' old scoundrel at the same time!"

"I sho' is, kunnin'. I ain't neebber had no baby what's mo' trouble'n dat ar old Jed. Whuss I doin' now, sub, but rubbin' dat ole foot's fairs wid lammest whilst I oughter be right at my washin' all day time, sub? I tell you, sub, I got to scabble for a libbin' wuss'n a scrubbin' ben dese heah days, sub."

"Where are you firs' bow, Mirandy?"

"Whab I libbin'? Whab I libbin'? Well, now, sub, I mo' shuss to tell you, sub, but me'n ole Jed is jes' a-quintin' down yander in a 'serted cabin what was only on de Black Bottoms road, sub, twell me him jes' sorter moved into it, sub. Yess, sub, his cecross fura what ole Mr. Bate Doggett, sub, his young grand-daughter, Miss Lottie-Mary, libbin', sub. An' hit sho' am a lonesome place. Et hit wad' fo' some skinkin' young man a-comin' out fura Niveveh to cote Miss Lottie-Mary when her ole grand-daddy ain't home. I tell you pinterd, kunnin' Todhunter, hit'd be jes' lak a graveyard, sub."

"I reckon so," said the colonel. "And who hee the young scamp that come out to see Miss Lottie-Mary, Mirandy?"

"Lawsd bless you, sub, dey's two-three y'ar old, sub. Mr. Stam Tucker's one. An' Miss Lottie-Mary sho' am a powerful handsome young g'el, sub. An' her ole granddaddy, he nuttin' do 'pear to be mighty skeered 'cuse sho' so gay an' flirtatious-like, sub."

"Well, Mirandy, I reckon that's only natural for a pretty g'el. You ain't never seen Tom Strickland callin' on her out there, have you?"

"No, sub; not to reckenize him, kunnin' Todhunter, but dat ain't sayin' he ain't been dar whilst I been away so much o' de time, kunnin'. Hecome young Mr. Tom Strickland talkin' to anybody but Miss Mary Todhunter, yo' own daughter, sub? Ain't he jes' pinterd head over heels in lub wid Miss Mary, sub?"

"He ain't tellin' me no, Mirandy," laughed the colonel. "But I reckon Lottie-Mary ain't no more to him than any other of a down pretty g'el. I wad' jus' wonder, that's all."

"Then he put his hand in his pocket and drew out a bill."

"Here, Mirandy," he said. "I would not be surprised but what this might come in handy while you're a-washin' with that old scamp Jed and his rheumatism. And if you'll stop by and see Mrs. Todhunter next time you come to town, I'll ask her if she can't give you a basketful of vittles she don't need."

"Glory halleluyah!" cried old Mirandy. "Dat ar money looks big as de side of a house to me, sub—it sho' do! Yess, sub, an' I gwine drop by you all's house, too, sub. An' I ain't neebber gwine forgit you fo' it, kunnin'. I sho' ain't. Some o' dese bright days I gwine pay you back more'n dat ar money; you see if I don't, sub!" Sudden tears had come into the brave old woman's eyes. Pouring out a flood of thanks, she bobbed happily away.

Colonel Todhunter looked after her almost sadly. "Them old algers," he said. "I love 'em just like they was kin to me, and they love us too. But the new breed—they hate us, and I ain't got no more use for 'em than I have for a snake. It's curious and it's somewhat of a tragedy, too, sub. I'll be dashed if I know what's goin' to come of it all some day."

CHAPTER VI.

The Strickland-Tucker feud.

HAD an hour later as Colonel Todhunter emerged from the law office of Judge Bolling he heard a sudden hurrying of footsteps, and Jim Birdsong joined him, breathless and much perturbed.

"What's on your mind now, Sim?" asked the colonel. "That's often you go galopin' aroun' with your tongue hangin' out o' your mouth like a young dog's in his first rabbit chase. What's the trouble?"

"I was jes' startin' out to look you up, colonel," replied Sim. "There's trouble enough, sub. Tom Strickland's got to drinkin' and picked a quarrel with Stam Tucker in the hotel bar-room, and you better come quick, sub, and prevent its bein' a mighty serious difficulty."

"I ain't got no patience with you young fellows here in Niveveh, Sim Birdsong," commented the colonel. "When Tom Strickland gets two or three drinks under his belt and wants to pick a fight why don't some of you turn in and lick the stuffin' out'n him? That's one of the best cures for the whisky quarrelin' habit dat ever was invented, sub."

The colonel chuckled as he spoke. "The most quarrelsome man in his cipe I ever know, sub, was old Bob Trevitt, in my regiment durin' the late unpleasantness, and he was cured just that way, sub. Sam Postbrooke made a point of cumpin' on Bob's trail ever 'time Bob got to naggin' any o' the other fellows, and Sam'd thrash Bob till his own mother wouldn't ha' known him, sub. And, sub, before the war was over I'll be double-handlin' if Bob Trevitt wasn't a teetotaler, sub, and he never got fightin' drunk after the war neither till he'd put two whole counties between him and Sam Postbrooke. Some of you boys ought to try that plan on Tom Strickland, sub."

"Colonel," answered Sim solemnly, "it's a sort o' curse on the Stricklands; that fierce temper o' theirs when they get under the influence of liquor, sub. You mustn't forget that Tom's own uncle killed his best friend, Lawrence Tolliver, durin' a spree and then drank himself to death afterwards tryin' to forget it, sub. It's a curse, sub, that's what it is."

"It ain't no curse that can't be lifted easy as raisin' your little finger, Sim Birdsong," said the colonel. "All in the world Tom Strickland's got to do is to leave whisky alone—he ain't a hard drinker now, and maybe he never will be, but he's got to leave it alone altogether. It don't agree with him. The Todhunters has got that same kind o' a curse in their family, only it's cucumbers 'stead of whisky. Th' ain't none of us Todhunters can eat cucumbers without bein' doubled up with cramp colic. Well, sub, I lifted that curse by eatin' cucumbers out o' my list of vittles since as if such a thing never growed, and Tom Strickland or any other man can do the same thing with whisky, sub."

"Then the colonel tapped Sim on the shoulder. "And, let me tell you one thing, my boy," he continued. "All this here talk about the terrible hard luck necessary to break off from a bad habit makes me fazed, sub. A man don't never have to fight but one day's fight at a time, and there's always a night's rest comin' in between if he don't lay awake pinyin' himself, sub. I know what I'm a-talkin' about. It ain't but a twelve hours' fight no time, and a man who can't fight that long is a mighty meany specimen of a man, sub."

"That's all very well, colonel," spoke Sim uneasily. "But Tom has egged Stam Tucker on till Stam's hurried out o' the barroom, white in the face, bolterin' over his shoulder that he'll be back in a minute—and you know just what that means, sub!"

Colonel Todhunter's face grew instantly grave. "He's gone to get his shootin' iron—the d—d little fool!" he exclaimed. "Tell me, Sim, is Tom Strickland armed?"

"I don't think he is, sub, but he's a-waitin' for Stam Tucker in that there barroom, and he's just feelin' reckless enough to give Stam every chance in the world for shootin' him after he himself picked the fuss and forced the personal difficulty, colonel."

"You come along with me, Sim," said the colonel. "Why the blazes and Stam Hill didn't you tell me all this at the start, sub?"

Swiftly they crossed the town square and entered the barroom of the Niveveh hotel. Tom Strickland, alone now but for the bartender, stood with one elbow resting on the bar.

"Howdy, colonel!" he cried. "You and Sim are just in time to join me in a drink, sir. What'll you have?"

"Tom," replied the colonel, "ordinarily I'd be glad to accept your invitation, but not today, my boy. I want you to go home, Tom."

Young Strickland smiled. "I'm sorry to disappoint you, colonel," he replied. "but I don't feel like going home right away."

"You've got to go, Tom," replied the colonel.

"Well, now, sir," suggested the other, "that's fairly open to argument in spite of your being so positive about it. I've got a special reason for stayin' here, colonel."

"Yes, I know, Tom. You're waitin' to have a personal difficulty with Stam Tucker, sub."

Tom Strickland laughed. "You're called the turn, sir, and under the circumstances you'll have to agree with me that I can't go now—not for a few minutes anyway."

"I don't agree to no such thing, you blamed young fool!" ejaculated Colonel Todhunter. "Do you reckon I'm a-goin' to let you and Stam Tucker shoot at each other and let me or let you wait, unarmed, for him to get a crack at you just because you're seen fit to come into town and begin drinkin', sub?"

"We're both free white and twenty-one, colonel," said Tom Strickland. "How are you goin' to prevent it?"

"At this Colonel Todhunter lost his temper. "I'll prevent it by thrashin' you within an inch of your life, sub. If you don't turn right around and get out o' this here barroom, that's how!" he announced resolutely. "I ain't a-goin' to stand no foolishness, Tom!"

"That ain't fair, Colonel Todhunter," protested Tom Strickland. "You're Miss Mary's father, and you're my father's oldest and best friend, sir. I wouldn't lift my hand against you for the world—but I've got to wait here till Stam Tucker gets back!"

"Tom," said Colonel Todhunter, "you'd either got to go home right now, sub, or thrash me, or take the best thrashin' from me you ever got in all your life, sub!"

Tom Strickland looked into Colonel Todhunter's eyes. They shone with the light of righteous battle. It was a preposterous situation. The humor of it suddenly struck the younger man, and he laughed outright. Then, suddenly, looking beyond Colonel Todhunter, his own eyes hardened into a dangerous anger.

"It's too late, colonel!" he exclaimed. "Tom comes the very man we're talking about!"

As he spoke Stamford Tucker entered the barroom, advancing directly toward him.

"I reckon you still lastest on a personal difficulty with me, Tom Strickland," he asked. "You ain't changed your mind none since the last few minutes?"

"I don't change my mind that easy," replied Tom Strickland, smiling. "Especially when a little resister like you gets to talkin' too freely about my father. You've got to stop it or else make up your mind to take the consequences."

"It ain't what I've said about your father that's rubbin' you the wrong way," retorted Stam Tucker. "It's because you've found out that I'm standin' too good a chance with Miss Mary Todhunter to suit you!"

Tom Strickland sprang at the speaker. As he did so Stam whipped out a pistol. It was quickly done, but not quick enough to give an opportunity to fire before the other struck. Tom's fist smashed into his face and felled him to the floor. The pistol flew ten feet away.

There was a moment's silence.

"Get up," said Tom, "and come at me like a man. I'll thrash you within an inch of your life!"

Stam Tucker staggered to his feet, wiping the blood from his face. But he made no move toward the man who had struck him.

Tom Strickland stepped coolly to where the pistol lay, picked it up deliberately and put it into his own pocket.

"I'll get even with you for this, Strickland," cried young Tucker. "I'll even up things before I'm done with you!"

"You'll never have a better time than right now," replied Tom. "But if you ain't in the humor I'll leave your pistol with the bartender here in a little while and you can get it later. But I give you fair warnin', Stam Tucker. The next time you make a move for a weapon you're goin' to get badly hurt. I'll be ready for you since you insist on it!"

Stam Tucker moved toward the door. His little eyes were venomous with hate.

"I'll get even with you!" he repeated. "You'll suffer for this yet!" And then he disappeared.

"You've played the wild on your watch, Tom," said Colonel Todhunter sternly. "This ain't no time for you to be pickin' fights with old Eph Tucker's son. It don't look right, and it won't help your father none in his political fight, either."

"I didn't bring it on, colonel," replied Tom Strickland. "Stamford Tucker's seen fit to say things about my father that no man can say and not get a licking from me. If I'm man enough to lick him, that's all there is to it, sir."

To save his life Colonel Todhunter could not continue his rebuke. But he managed to part Tom, Tom Strickland, with something like an expression of disapproval on his countenance.

"I reckon I ain't cut out to preach to other people what they should do and what they shouldn't," he confessed to himself later. "I ought to have given that blamed young fool a lecture as long as my arm, but it just wasn't in me to do it under the circumstances. And that's wrong, because the only good excuse an old man's got for livin' is to sorter act as a guidepost to keep young men from followin' the roads that lead to trouble. Bein' mighty lit the good in that line myself, I'm a-goin' to mind my responsibility on old Bill Strickland and let him straighten out his own way, sub. And then I'll ask the Old Master up above to make me better dith' for my duty than I seem to be at this precise moment. Jus' judgin' from the way I weakened on Tom!"

Suddenly one day during the campaign the Hon. William J. Strickland returned from St. Louis. An expression of acute resentment so contrary to his customary cheerfulness rested on his face that Colonel Todhunter, entering the candidate's Niveveh law office, could not but remark the change.

"What on earth's the matter, Bill?" he asked. "You look like the last rose o' summer."

Colonel Strickland attempted a smile. "Oh, nothing particular, Thurs," he replied. "I reckon I was just meditating on the vanity of human life."

"Well, it must have been 'Bare from the tomb a doleful sound,' all right," laughed Colonel Todhunter. Then he took a second look at his friend.

"You're lyin' to me, Bill Strickland," he said. "There's something gone wrong, and it's on your mind. What is it?"

"Thurs," responded the other, "it ain't anything you can help. There's no good in my unloadin' my troubles on you just because you're got broad shoulders."

"Unload 'em anyhow," returned Colonel Todhunter. "You ought to know folks can shed other folks' troubles on their shoulders like water from a duck's back."

BULGAR MOTHER TELLS OF WAR

A Recent Letter Tells of Nation's Great Sacrifice.

PUTS 500,000 MEN IN FIELD

Few Families But Had One or More Sons at Front; Defeat Meant Destruction of Country; Flower of Youth Slain; Peace May Be Delayed.

Written to a friend in this country by a Bulgarian woman, the mother of a family, the following letter describes conditions in the warlike little Balkan state as they were in the middle of January, when all the men of military age who were not lying ill or wounded in the hospitals were with the army facing the Turks at the front. The name of the town from which the letter comes is omitted. It is dated Jan. 12:

"It seems only a few years ago that we were sitting in that room, with the windows open toward the beautiful view on the Bosphorus. * * * But as I see the eager faces of my daughters bend over my shoulder and a look in their eyes full of curiosity to know what message this letter from America brought us in these troubled times my dream fades away. I awake to the reality of the long time passed since we parted. * * *

"Yes, our country is in great distress. Many of our men and our dear ones in the battlefield, and many young and promising lives are lost forever. But the righteousness of our cause, with the moral and material help of all the civilized world, sustains us. Thanks to God that our arms are conquering, for were it otherwise, after so many sacrifices and so much bloodshed, it would be total destruction for our country.

Entire Nation Involved.

"As Bulgaria has only 4,000,000 people and had to give an army of 500,000 soldiers, this war became a national war. All the nation is engaged in it. War are the homes that have not sent a member of their family to the battlefield, while many have sent two or three, even four, sons. I know one mother who has six soldier sons, while the other day I read in our papers an actual fact—that a certain mother had ten sons in the war!

"My husband has passed his fifty years and so is out of the army. Thanks be to God, my boys are all old enough. One is seventeen, the other only thirteen years old. But instead of them there is my son-in-law, which for us means just the same as a son. My heart aches when I think of all the dangers and hardships to which he is exposed down there. Yet I must show myself courageous to my married daughter. Her husband has taken part in the assault and taking of Lovozgrad (Turkish name Kirk Kilise), a famous and well fortified fort near after Adrianople. He was also in the awful battle of Lule Burgas, etc., the great and bloody campaign of the days, which were fatal for the Turks and covered our army with glory.

Awful Sacrifice.

"But how many lives were sacrificed! My son-in-law was slightly wounded in the leg and continued to fight, but there he lost his younger brother, an intelligent young man, a promising lawyer, who finished his studies only a year. My brother-in-law, my mother had three sons down there, and she did not know for which one to pray or to think first. Now she prays that the other two may be spared her.

"The other day I was present at a reunion for two brothers killed in the war; a third brother is wounded, and of the fourth his family has no news. Our best young men are in the army—professors, lawyers, engineers, etc. All of them have fought bravely, and many have given their lives to liberate the slaves of Macedonia. As it was so many years ago in your civil war.

"My brother, whom you will know as a military man, is now of the rank of general. I have also two brothers-in-law, a colonel and a captain. Both took part in several combats. The second is seriously ill after exposure to cold and cold. My brother-in-law, on my husband's side is now one of the Bulgarian delegates to the peace conference in London. My niece's husband, a doctor, is also in the front lines near the battlefield, besides many other relatives and a great many friends.

Hoping For Peace News.

"Now we are awaiting with great anxiety the conference in London. Different news reaches us, encouraging and disappointing. This expectation between hope and fear is very distressing for our nerves, which are strained till they seem ready to burst, unable to bear any more. When shall we hear the words 'Hence to the earth? In these days we had our Christmas and hoped that it would bring peace, but in vain. Shall we hear again the roar of the cannon? The Turks are so weak, even a Turkish yavash, yavash, slowly, slowly in their ways, and there are so many and various interests and appetites in Europe that it appears we may have yet long to wait for the olive branch. Enough blood has been shed, although we are now much better prepared and our army is ready to go forward again."

$600,000,000 OF AMERICAN CAPITAL IS IN MEXICO.

Enormous Financial Interests at Stake For United States Investors.

According to a Philadelphia tourist who recently returned from Mexico, about $600,000,000 of American capital is invested in various enterprises in that country and that many millions more would readily be available in the development of its wonderful resources if peace could be secured.

Philadelphia is not only largely interested in Mexican mines, railways, timber tracts and farming industries, but buys and sells largely in Mexico. The Laguna corporation, which has vast lumber interests in Campeche, is chiefly of capitalists in Philadelphia.

The Tehuantepec National railway is owned by the Mexican government and was completed in 1904, the cost of construction being met by a loan of about $12,000,000. The road was re-built in 1906 by S. Foxworth & Son, a British contracting firm, which also constructed harbor terminals. The cost was about $100,000,000 in Mexican money. A managing partnership was entered into between the government and the Foxworths, with a lease of fifty years from July 1, 1908.

Mexicans are large purchasers of American drugs and medicines, while a large trade is done in chemicals needed in the treatment of hides and skins sent to this and other countries.

According to consular reports, the drug bankers have found a rich field in Mexico for the pellets sent out by them, while American made fabrics are much in favor, and the suspenders made here have a vogue with patricians and peon.

America imports goat skins in large quantities from Mexico, but this trade would be larger were it not for the political troubles of the country. Prices are affected, the supply interfered with and not infrequently cost is added to the transportation rates through the difficulties of the republic.

JOAQUIN MILLER'S LAST POEM.

"At Final Parting" Title of Work Written on Deathbed.

The last poem Joaquín Miller wrote was composed by him in his last illness, after he knew that death was near.

"This is my last message to the world," he told his wife, to whom he gave the piece of paper on which he had laboriously pencilled the following lines:

"At Final Parting,"

Could I but teach man to believe,
Could I but make small men to grow,
To break frail spider webs that weave
About their heads and bind them low,
Could I but sing one song and lay
Grin doubt, I then could so my way
In trackless silence, clear serene
And satisfied, from off the scene.
But, ah, this doubt, this doubt,
This doubt of God, this doubt of good,
The dimmed spot will not out.

LOVE LETTER OF 300 B. C.

"Oh, You Poppy!" Priest Wrote to Priestess on Papyrus.

An Egyptian love letter of the third century before Christ, written on papyrus by a priest to a priestess of the temple of Amon-Ita and just discovered on the withered breast of the woman's petrified body in a museum at San Francisco, is the proof that affluence existed in Egypt thousands of years ago.

The discovery was made by the curator, Dr. George Burton, and his assistants while rewrapping the mummy, which had been roughly treated in a recent move from one case to another. As yet the message has been translated only partially, but Dr. Burton says a free construction of it gives the following meaning:

"Oh, Golden Poppy, long are the days when my eyes beheld thee not. My heart is sick with love for thee—love that finds but little solace here amid my brethren. Carefully guard our secret, lest my life and thy life pay the penalty of our unrighteous love."

WILL SHOOT ALIEN AVIATORS.

British Rule Provides Summary Fate For Intruders Over Forts.

The aerial navigation bill in England has received the royal assent, and it became operative immediately. Foreign airships now cross England at their peril unless their pilots declare the objects of their journey. Should pilots pass over forts, royal dockyards or arsenals they are liable to be shot at and killed.

The terms of the new act will be communicated to foreign governments as well as the regulations to be made by the war office. Air craft passing prohibited places will be warned by smoke signals before they are fired at. Rockets or flashlights will be used at night. Experiments are in progress to find the best guns for use on and against air craft.

The Real Villain.

"Are you the villain in this troupe?" asked the hagenkeman who was banding theatrical trunks.

"No," replied the youth with black, curly hair. "I used to be, but the real villain is the treasurer of the company, and by this time he must be about 500 miles on his way to somewhere else."

QUIT CALOMEL

Thousands Are Turning From This Dangerous Drug.

A Safe Vegetable Substitute Is Olive Tablets for the Liver.

Dr. F. M. Edwards, a prominent physician of Ohio, has discovered a new laxative and liver tonic in a combination of vegetable materials, mixed with olive oil, which is in effect almost exactly like the old and untrustworthy calomel, except that there are none of the bad after effects of calomel.

Dr. Edwards has long been a foe of calomel, though he recognized its value along with its dangers. His distrust of the uncertain drug eventually started him years ago towards experiments with the view of discovering a substitute and he is today in possession of the long-sought-for combination, which is in the shape of a little sugar-coated, olive-colored tablet of 17 years' experience and precise are embodied in these marvelous little tablets.

They are called Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. They act on the bowels and their effect on the liver has been the means of relief to many of Dr. Edwards' regular patients as well as to thousands of others who have suffered and were afraid of calomel. They are gentle in their action, yet always effective. They bring about that exuberance of spirit, that natural buoyancy which should be enjoyed by everyone, by cutting up the liver and clearing the system of harmful impurities. 10c and 25c per box. The Prettiest Frocks

For Tiny Girls
Girls 3 to 6 Years
Girls 6 to 11 Years

That We've Seen In ANY Store

Not far from here is a firm that has made children's dresses only for their own retail shops. Those little frocks have been so carefully and beautifully made that every mother who has seen them has wanted them for her girls.

Love seemed to go into their designing—as love has to go into everything that is supremely well done. Love seemed to guide the stitches, work the perfect buttonholes, choose the buttons—in fact, knowledge of and love for little children seemed to inspire those dresses from beginning to end.

We've been after these people a long time to let us put some of their prettiest dresses on sale here:

We're Just Succeeded! So when you want the best of all everyday and "Sunday" frocks for your little girl come to the second floor and ask us for the little garments made by people that love children and made a study of their clothes.

All the materials are very fine, the colors are perfect, the designs simple and individual, buttons of the best and the work beautifully done. They are, in fact, such dresses as you would make at home, but so little priced it would be foolish to do so.

At 6 months to a year sizes are long and short dresses of longcloth and other soft, fine fabrics cunningly trimmed with delicate embroideries and lace, pin tucks and ribbons. 50c upward.

Two to six year sizes are long waist, Norfolk and straight pleated affairs of dainty, lawn, voile, pique, batiste in white, zephyr, chambray and barred madras in colors. They are decorated with pretty laces, ribbon bows and rosettes, hand embroidery, tucks, heading, finishing bands and bias bands. Some of the frocks have bloomers. In some sheer white waists are combined with colored skirts, 50c to $3.00.

Six to fourteen year sizes are lovely indeed. About the same materials are used as for the smaller sizes, but the trimmings, scalloped and other effects are actually girlish. These are priced at $1.00 to $5.00.

Sun Hats of gingham or pique, white or color, heading washable—are 50c to $3.00 each.

Stylish Pumps and Oxfords

A stock that invites immediate selection and prices that are warranted lowest for good footwear.

This four-button oxford in patent and dull leathers, $3.50.

This button boot in white canvas and nubuck; dull, patent, velvet, suede, cravenette and satin, $3.00, $3.50 and $4.00 pair.

The smart low shoes that will be highest in favor this season are— for women—pumps, all leather in all leathers; button oxfords in patent and dull leathers; and two step pumps. 10-button boots in white canvas and nubuck, and patent leather for dress.

Wright-Metzler's Shoe Store has long been patronized by critical people who demand footwear in the height of Fashion, and by economical folk who want good, solid-leather, shapely, long-wearing and comfortable shoes. Our stock this season is in grand shape to supply all demands made by the critical and the economical by reason of enlarged stocks and more varied assortments. In a word, it's a store of the best footwear for women, men and children at unusually low prices.

Comparison will forcefully prove that Wright-Metzler shoes are better in point of leather and shoemaking, and lower in price by 50c to $1.00 a pair than can be gotten at any other store. This assertion is not made carelessly, nor to fill up newspaper space, nor without regard to truthfulness, but in all earnestness, and it can be proven by any one who makes comparisons about town.

Women's Low Shoes are $2.00 to $4.00.
Men's Low Shoes are $3.50 to $5.00

Men's Oxfords are button or lace in tan and black leathers. Flat narrow shapes are newest and the fashionable toe is dubbed "The Trump." These shoes are solid leather and low priced.

Women's low shoes are slender and have Cuban and Spanish heels—the last named being lower than the former. The pumps are decorated with tailored bows and buckles.
